A Garland of Baptist Flowers.

Preparation of a Bibliography.

One of the by-products of a study and work in Baptist Bibliography over the past twenty-two years has been a keen appreciation of the many contributions by Baptists to all fields of learning and experience. Although some might argue that the denominational background or affiliation of a writer is of no value in such an equation; there are however many distinct contributions which flow directly from Baptist-ness.

In each field of knowledge, one of the basic tasks underlying all research is the compilation of a bibliography of the subject. The obvious lack of these in most of the denominational fields, and in that of the Baptists in particular has been a serious lack for a long time. We really have not known what the literature of the Baptists was. Small wonder then, that the glib accusation that Baptists were an illiterate denomination, has been frequently made, and less frequently successfully replied to. Scholars working in the various fields of Baptist activity have all too often been unaware of the existence of important sources. Not that Baptist Bibliography was an unworked field - rather it was a field that had been surveyed, and some furrows turned, but the ploughing had ceased. This was roughly the state of affairs when I began work in this area. As early as 1865 William Crowell¹, in the Missionary Jubilee has included a valuable 67 page section entitled: "Literature of American Baptists" which was indeed for many years the only thing of its kind.

A Garland of Baptist Flowers.

Also present to use and work with, was Joseph Smith's A Descriptive Catalogue of Friends Books, (1867); and of direct Baptist interest his third volume, Bibliotheca Anti-Quakeriana, (1873), where a large representation of the Anti-Quakeriana was Baptist. Joseph Angus, working in England, had gathered a large body of Baptist material, the catalogue of which, a stout quarto, published in 1908, was quite helpful, but of course largely British in character. Both on this continent and in England shortly after the turn of the century efforts in progress resulted in publication. In Canada, the Rev. William E. McIntyre in 1914, began the publication of his Baptist Authors. A Manual of Bibliography. Three fascicules, totalling 192 pages, appeared in 1914, and carried the work (an alphabetic arrangement) through Day, Robert. Lack of support for the publication, compiled with loss of financial backing, brought the project to a close. In England, William Thomas Whitley in 1916 issued the first volume of his Baptist Bibliography. This and a companion volume issued in 1922, provided a listing of British Baptists down to 1837, in a chronological arrangement.

Most of these works pretty well passed over the holdings of American libraries, although Whitley had consulted "An ancient catalogue" [of Brown University]. This is probably the printed catalog of 1843.

The very rich resources untapped for Baptist study of many of the great university libraries, as well as the highly specialized libraries of theological seminaries and historical societies, pointed out the need for a Baptist Bibliography whose outlook would be world-wide and scope would be world-wide and broadly inclusive.

A Garland of Baptist Flowers.

In 1935 I began a Baptist Bibliography on cards. During several years work on this project, national and trade catalogs were checked, as well as published biographical catalogs of most of the Baptist seminaries and colleges. At hand for ready consultation, the Samuel Colgate Baptist Historical Collection provided the many actual examples of those items we wished to describe. This Collection had grown rapidly and coherently and preserved many rare and sought after titles, many of them absolutely unique. References from these several sources provided a corpus of approximately 40,000 entries for the Baptist Bibliography.

This Bibliography in progress Mrs. Starr and I next moved to the Library of Congress, in 1940, where with the help of checkers and typists we compared our group of 40,000 cards against the 10,000, 000 or so cards in the Union Catalog of the Library of Congress. The results were all we had hoped for. We added many thousands of location symbols for libraries who had copies of items we listed. We obtained many new titles by familiar authors, and occasionally a new Baptist author. This adventure in long hours and days and weeks at the Nation's capitol netted the Bibliography, I estimate about 20,000 new titles. The Director of the Union Catalog, informed me that ours was the biggest checking program in the Union Catalog, up to that date. Since that time (1940) we have added another 25,000 cards, making a total of approximately 85,000 author cards on file.

From the beginning of this project the value of project has become steadily more apparent, although the increase in bulk made publication seem more and more unlikely. After preparation of a manuscript for authors beginning with the letter A, plans for publication were made. Early in 1947 the first proofs were received from the Judson press, and after months of revision and checking, the first volume was published early in September of 1947. This is entitled "A Baptist Bibliography; being a register of printed material by and about Baptists; including works written against the Baptists". ...Section A. Phila., Judson press, 1947. This volume runs to 240 pages and lists more than 2456 items.

The rapid increase in printing costs seemed to indicate for subsequent volumes some form of reproduction other than printing. After some experimentation the volume comprising B-Biloxi was mimeographed, and completed by May 1952. This consists of 323 sheets, comprising more than 3138 entries.

A preliminary checking edition of volume 3 (Bin-Bz) was prepared and distributed in the summer of 1952. These were distributed to some 35 Baptist and Baptist related libraries for checking. Upon return of these sections, the location symbols were then added to the master checking set, from which the final manuscript was prepared. The completed v. 3 (Bin-Bz) was issued in 1953. It is a volume of 329 pages, plus 45 pages of index, and lists 5,498 items. The manuscript of the volume we are presently working on C-Colby, is expected to be ready for publication in 1954.

This bibliographical project is now well established. It is hoped to issue one or more volumes a year in alphabetic sequence, until the whole project is completed. This will then comprise a bibliographic reference work of about twenty volumes, with possibly two or more index volumes. From this larger work can then be drawn many selected bibliographies and reference lists, for use in specific areas of subject interest.

What is Baptist Literature.

From the very beginning two vexing problems have plagued all those who would do research in the various Baptist fields. The first one asking "What is Baptist Literature?" and "Who are Baptist Authors?" The answer entails many complex and varied investigations. It includes the kind of sleuthing which trails an author such as Adolphus Julius Frederick Behrends from Baptist to Congregationalism; as Charles Francis Potter from Baptist through Unitarianism to Humanism; as Freeborn Garrettson Hibbard from Free Baptist to Congregationalism; as Roger Williams from Church of England through the Baptist position to the position of Seeker; the many that were Baptist and became Quakers; those such as Stephen Remington who was Methodist and became Baptist, and those such as Cyrille Hector Octave Côte, Catholic who became violently Baptist. The chase is thus an exciting one. Sometimes the writings of a man while still nominally in another denomination before his switch-over contain significant indications of his changed viewpoint. Thus any reflections in the writings, manuscript or otherwise, of Luther Rice and Adoniram Judson, indicating changes in their thinking leading them from Congregationalist to the Baptist view would be valuable, as would indeed any in the Episcopal period of the Rev. Baptist Wriothsesley Noel, before he adopted the Baptist position.

A Garland of Baptist Flowers.

The prominent public figures are fixed relatively easily, but how difficult it is sometimes to be sure of the obscure controversialists. In the immersion contest a reading of the pamphlet becomes necessary and sometimes we end with an immersionist author, but not a Baptist, but a Disciple, or a Dunker (who further confuse the popular mind by calling themselves German Baptist Brethren). In seventeenth century England we soon learn that some called Anabaptists really are, while others are Baptists.

What shall be Included.

After we have established who is a Baptist author, it must next be determined what shall be classed as materials to include in a Baptist Bibliography, for clearly it is not possible to include all the writings of even distinct Baptists. We have been guided in many of these decisions by the criteria of use for historical investigation. Thus the fictional writings of many Baptists have been passed over, but not the social novels of Thomas Dixon, Jr., whose Black Hood, dealing with the Ku-Klux Klan; and the Clansman were widely read. His novel: The Leopard's Spots; a romance of the white man's burden - 1865-1900; also made its mark. Nor will we forget John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, although I have limited notice in the published form only to editions having Baptist revisors, editors, printers or publishers. We can also include with pride Edward Bellamy whose novel: Looking Backward, stirred the world of 1887.

Location of Research Material.

We come now to the next issue of importance. This is "Where is it?" To this inquiry we have devoted special attention, for next to knowing the bibliography of a subject is the necessity of knowing where particular items may be consulted.

The type of information which the card catalog furnishes for the user of one particular library, the Baptist Bibliography through its location symbols likewise provides. The holding libraries owning copies of the sought for items, are thus marshalled.

Thus once the student finds the particular item he is interested in he can immediately ascertain what libraries have the item. For obscure titles and ephemera in general, this search may entail many difficulties, - and in many cases may result in a description but no location. In some case there is only a possibility that a particular item was even published. Hence it is always a bibliographer's satisfaction to locate a previously unknown item, and the collector's satisfaction to buy from some obscure catalog of an out-of-the-way dealer, an unrecorded or unknown item. These sought for items provide many a thrill for the constant reader of used book catalogs.

Ultimately of course the most satisfying thing for bibliographer and research student is to have the research item immediately at hand. The use of photostats and microfilm make available much of this Baptistiana Rara that we could not otherwise consult. During the last few years the American Baptist Historical Society has added almost five thousand (5000) feet of 35mm. microfilm to its holdings. Much of this consists of copies of rare Seventeenth and Eighteenth century British Baptist material.

Although we would ideally have all the research materials in a location easily consulted, some of the materials are very widely scattered. A bibliography with location symbols saves the research student time, but it still does not obviate the need for good libraries, indeed the better supplied the library in the special subject field, the happier will be the research student. This summer I made an analysis of the holdings of the two largest Baptist libraries in this country, through a location symbol count in the B-Biloxi volume of the Baptist Bibliography. We are interested to note that the Samuel Colgate Baptist Historical Collection has 1255 items of 3200 listed or 39 per cent, and the American Baptist Historical Society has 512 items of 3200 listed or 16 per cent. In either one of these cases the percentage of holdings is very large. It has been my experience that once it is known what the literature of a given field is, and given time, money, and sufficient effort, that a subject field can be very materially added to, with consequent benefit to research workers.

How the Bibliography can be used to further Research.

The more complete the record we can assemble of Baptist activity and writing in the past, the more valid will research be based on such a wider bibliographic experience. Thus anyone who carries on an investigation in an historical period and unwittingly passes over the known sources surely opens upon himself the sluice gates of criticism, so indeed the patient investigator who would prove a thesis or add new truth must leave no stone unturned. The third question then, that of how can be considered. "How can the Baptist Bibliography be used to further research which will help tell the Baptist story, and to contribute to the life and the strengthening of Baptist principles?"

A Garland of Baptist Flowers.

Not alone is a bibliography a record of finished works, it is also the raw material of many new yet-to-be-done studies. Thus it not only teaches what exists, but where it has nothing to say points out need of research. So although I know of a study of the Temperance Movement in the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Baptist association, I know of none covering the whole Baptist constituency. So also there exists no studies of Baptist opposition to worldly amusements (Dancing, Theatre-going, Card-playing, etc. etc.); although the literature is well studded with tracts and pamphlets voicing this opposition.

Who will tell the story of Baptist opposition to the Catholic church? Here we may cite the writings of John Dowling and Justin D. Fulton, where lurid titles, bindings, and illustrations demonstrate not only an attitude of mind but indicate a cultural level. This story has yet to be told with historical perspective.

The scientific writings of many missionaries are of exceptional interest. Thus Francis Mason's The natural productions of Burmah; or, Notes on the fauna, flora, and minerals of the Tenasserim provinces and the Burman empire, published in Maulmain, 1850; is a landmark in the study of the natural history of Burma. It brings as well exceptional insights into the life, manners and customs of the Burmese. Very often it will be seen that distinct contributions to knowledge have been made by Baptist missionaries. Not only have they pioneered in producing written languages, and Bible translations for many peoples, but they have produced whole literatures, grammars, arithmetics, and dictionaries. William Carey learned more than fifty languages of India and produced translations of the Bible in whole or in part in the following languages;

Ballochee (Bulooshe)	Karnata
Telugu	Kashmeer
Assamese	Marwar
Bengali	Mooltanee
Bundlecund (Bhogulkund)	Nepaul (ese)
Dukslinu (Sindh)	Oojein
Hunaj	Oriya
Huriana	Pali (Maguda)
Hurotee (Harotee)	Sanscrit
Jumboo	Southern Sindhee

He produced many grammars and dictionaries. His fellow workers should be memorialized also. We can hardly mention Carey without Marshman, and Ward. John Taylor Jones' work in the Siamese language should be noted, and Thomas J. Bowen's linguistic studies of the Yorubas (Africa). Because of concentrated Baptist activity in the Kongo, Frederick Starr's A bibliography of Congo languages, Chicago, 1908, reads like a Baptist Who's Who.

Adoniram Judson's translations have stood up remarkably well. His dictionary of the Burmese language has been for many years the official dictionary for use in Burmese law courts. No Burmese dictionary has surpassed it for critical and precise definition. I recently had occasion to supply an oriental scholar with information concerning Jonathan Wade's compilation:

Thesaurus of Karen knowledge, comprising traditions,
legends or fables, poetry, customs, superstitions,
demonology, therapeutics, etc. alphabetically arranged and forming a complete native Karen dictionary, with definitions and examples, illustrating the usages of every word; written by Sau Kau-Too, and compiled by J.
 Wade. Tavoy, Karen Mission Press, 1847-50. 4 vols.

A Garland of Baptist Flowers.

The text is in Karen. I am aware of only three libraries in the United States which have copies: New York Public (3 vols. only); Cleveland Public Library; and the American Baptist Historical Society. Wade was a gifted member of the first graduating class (1823) of the Hamilton Literary and Theological Institute. His fellow classmate Eugenio Kincaid was a missionary to the Karens. Another classmate was John Newton Brown, author of the New Hampshire Confession of Faith (1833), and long the Editorial Secretary of the American Baptist Publication Society. A fourth member of that same class of seven (7) was a prolific author, John Glazier Stearns, remembered now chiefly for his life-long opposition to Free-masonry. His:

An inquiry into the nature and tendency of speculative free-masonry; with an appendix. To which is added,
Plain Truth; a dialogue; and the author's reasons.
Utica, 1829. 5th ed.

I have a record of 24 libraries having this edition. This is a valuable book and is frequently kept under lock and key. It is however not a scarce item.

In the persistent opposition of Baptists to secret societies and masonry in particular in the early 19th century, Joshua Bradley's:

Some of the beauties of free-masonry; being extracts from publications, which have received the approbation of the wise and virtuous of the fraternity: with introductory remarks designed to remove the various objections against the order. Rutland, Vt., 1816. 318p.

This stands as an almost solitary exception of praise and defense.

Of all of these men we might say as Richard Henry Stoddard said:

A Garland of Baptist Flowers.

"For they depart, but their books remain;
Through these they speak to us of what was best
In the loving heart and the noble mind;"

(From Eugene Field's Love affairs of a bibliomaniac)

So might the story be extended. Baptist influences have traversed even to names, as Henry J. Cadbury recently reminded me in his allusion to the name lists in the Harvard catalogs. We too can point to dozens of men named after famous Baptist leaders. Let it suffice to recall a few: William Carey Crane; George Dana Boardman Pepper; and Adoniram Judson Gordon.

As we sweep into the Twenty-first century we can recall with a sense of satisfaction three hundred years of literary activity. Some it has been primitive, and some touched with invective, but much of it has been elevated and spirited, characterized by a deep sense of social obligation and a concern with the realities of the democratic spirit. These are the voices which call us to new heights, and challenge us to live in our day the demand of the Baptist pioneers - the men who in this country, in the words of Henry C. Vedder - "completed the Reformation".
